Solar Hybrid Scooter by IEM

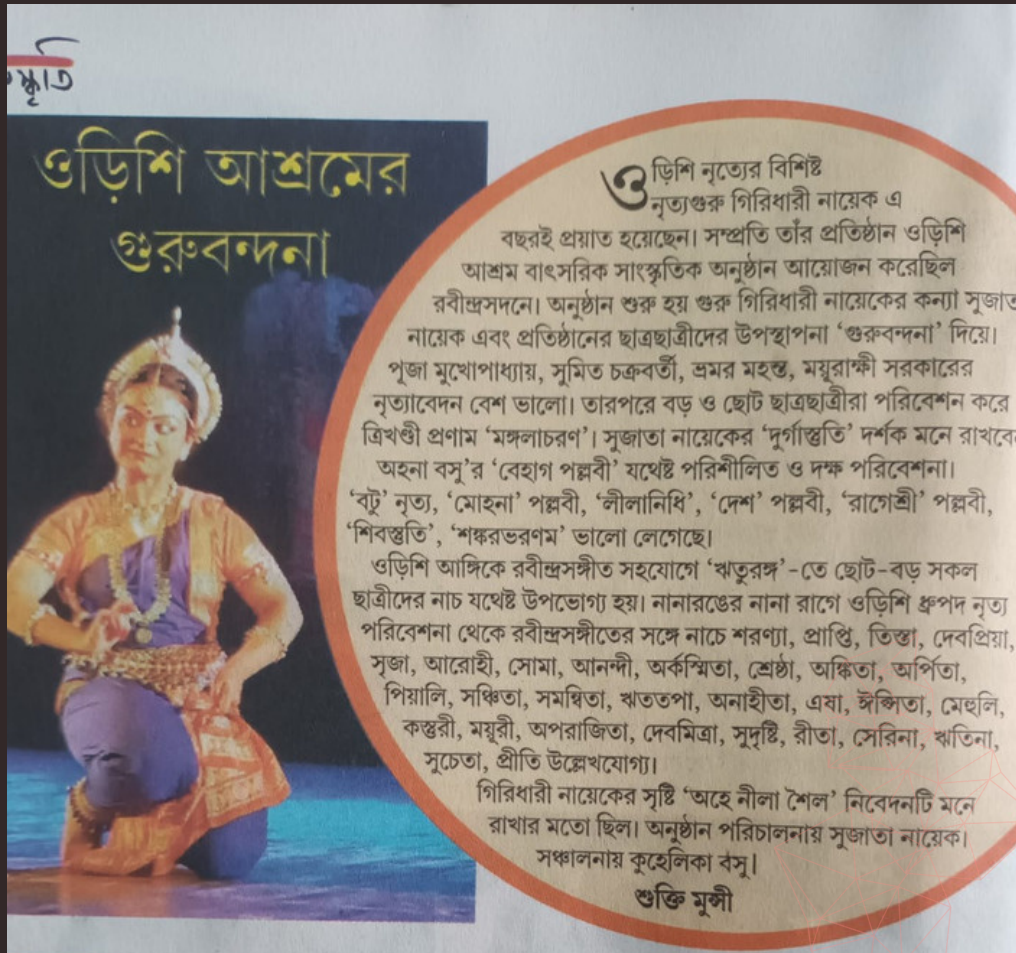

Now we also have to conquer global warming and inflation. But the question arises, how will an ordinary person continue with their day-to-day activities? How will they commute to their workplace every day? Will those who have purchased petrol-driven two-wheelers or cars again spend their hard-earned money to purchase a new electric vehicle? But yet another problem lies with these electric vehicles. While traveling, the battery might get completely discharged and then the only option left would be to push.

In keeping with everyday problems like global warming, inflation and even the unpredictable problems if electric vehicles, Professor Subhamoy Ray, scientist at the Institute of Engineering and Management, has devised ground-breaking technology in the form of a solar hybrid scooter. In this technology, a petrol-driven two-wheeler can be converted to solar hybrid scooter enabling the petrol-powered two-wheeler to run on batteries as well. This provides the options running the vehicle on petrol when the battery is discharged. A solar panel is also installed on the scooter so that the battery can be recharged. This solar panel is detachable and once charging is done, it can be removed, folded and kept in the boot space of the scooter. Also, if needed, the battery can be removed and charged separately anywhere.

It will take one and half-hour to fully charge the Solar Hybrid Scooter. Once fully charged, it can travel up to 100 kilometres. The maximum speed of this vehicle is 80 km per hour on battery mode. It will cost only Rs. 8 to charge it completely, which means it will cost just 80 paise to travel one kilometre. Thus, this will hugely reduce the tension of price hike.

Above all, this technology will not only be cost-friendly but also eco-friendly.

UEM FRACTION PROJECT

Education is the foundation on which life and success of an individual depends. Thus depends the future of a nation. Teachers are the most vital component in any academic program. Teacher Education is a programme that is related to the policies and procedures designed to prepare potential teachers with knowledge, attitudes and skills which they require to perform their task successfully in the class for the benefit of the students and wider society.

Fraction is a great initiative in this path of development. A €1million project involving a consortium of 13 Universities world-wide, a Post Graduate Teacher's Training Programme (PgPTE) launched in collaboration with the European Union and co-funded by the Erasmus. UEM, Kolkata is the only Educational Institute to be selected from the Eastern India in this aspiring project and work in tandem with the consortium.

The motto is "Developing future - oriented academic curricula in Teacher Education with innovative methodologies for Nex-Gen Asian HEIs". Wroclaw University of Science and Technology in Poland is coordinating the Project.

FRACTION will give an opportunity to teachers at HEIs in India, China, and Vietnam to work with qualified teams from EU. Therefore, teachers with new qualifications will be more desired as participants of cultural exchanges and cooperation with other countries. It will also enable developing international skills, exposing staff for different approaches to learning and research, opportunity to build long-term relationships, all of which could be adopted at their universities. A centre with trained staff and suitable facilities for delivering training on teaching and learning methods, as well as for practicing curriculum design is a long-term expectation in all the three countries. The reason to compose the consortium combines the expertise of EU partners in education field, experience in capacity project implementation and the need of Asian universities to develop their competencies in education field. They will help us to define required profiles (knowledge, skills and competencies) of teacher education experts.

The project has several aspiring objectives:

- Analysis of existing capacity in the HEIs in the field of Teacher Education.
- Development of curricula and accreditation of Postgraduate Program in Teacher Education (PgPTE).
- Set up infrastructure for PgPTE and Distance Learning Platform based on LMS.
- Teacher training of PgPTE .
- Launching Postgraduate Program in Teacher Education (PGgPTE).
- Monitoring & Quality Assurance.
- To encourage cooperation between the EU and Partner Countries and support eligible Partner Countries in addressing challenges in the management and governance of their HEI.
- Improving the quality of higher education, developing new and innovative education programs, modernizing higher education systems through reform policies.
